What a thoughtful and memorable gift for Year 11 students to take with them into their future.

Just one of the clips from the video of some of the staff waving goodbye.

Blood Donating

Welsh Blood Service

More people may be eligible to donate blood or platelets from now in Wales since World Blood Donor Day which was on Monday 14th June, following changes to the eligibility questions asked.

All donors, regardless of gender, will now be asked a new set of questions about sexual behaviours, focused mainly on the last three months, meaning that more people from LGBTQ+ communities will be eligible to donate.

The change has been introduced following recommendations made by the FAIR (For the Assessment of Individualised Risk) steering group, which is a UK wide collaboration including representatives from all UK blood services, medical and scientific experts, LGBTQ+ groups, as well as a selection of patients and donors.

Married couple Carl and Martin from Newbridge are now eligible to donate following the criteria change.

Carl, a Quality Manager, said: "I am absolutely thrilled to be booked in to donate under these changes. I'm grateful for the efforts of campaigners, academics and clinicians who have made this happen. It is only fair in today's society that everyone's behaviours should be treated the same and not by the gender of their partner".

Sales Manager Martin, added: "Today is a very special day for Carl and me. Together we can now make potentially lifesaving donations to help patients in need. My father had numerous blood transfusions and I am forever grateful to those donors for their support. My niece also received many blood transfusions during her treatment for leukaemia. She is now thankfully in full remission and I am absolutely delighted to potentially help someone like her recover from such a serious illness."

Shane Andrews MBE, also booked to donate for the first time on Monday, 14th June.

Shane said: "As Chair of Archway (Network Rail's LGBT+ employee network), I have been heavily involved in improving diversity and inclusivity in the rail industry and I am delighted I am now part of these changes introduced today.

"Today is my first donation but it definitely won't be my last. I intend to donate regularly now and feel honoured to commence my lifesaving journey on World Blood Donor Day but also during Pride month."

Around 350 blood donations are needed each day by the Welsh Blood Service to maintain a steady supply of vital blood and blood components to 20 hospitals across the country.

Welsh Blood Service Director, Alan Prosser said: "We are thrilled to mark World Blood Donor Day by welcoming more people into our lifesaving team of blood and platelet donors.

"From today, more people can safely donate thanks to a new and fairer eligibility criteria.

"Whilst blood services are not responsible for setting the rules around donation, we are delighted that our work in collaboration with the FAIR steering group has led to the new regulations.

"If you have never given blood before, please consider supporting us by donating at your local donation clinic."

Head of Nursing at Welsh Blood Service, Zoe Gibson said: "Patient safety is at the heart of everything we do. All donations are tested for significant infections before they are sent to hospitals to maintain the safety of the blood supply chain.

"All donors will now be asked about recent sexual behaviours which might have increased their risk of acquiring an infection. This means that some donors might not be eligible on the day but may be eligible to donate in the future.

"Our priority is to make sure that donors can answer the pre-donation questions in a setting that makes them feel comfortable and safe. Our staff have been trained to make sure these more personal conversations are conducted with care and sensitivity and that accurate information is captured.

"We are asking that donors consider these new questions alongside existing health and travel questions when they book an appointment so that if they don't meet the new criteria, they can re-schedule for a later date.

WREXHAM TRADING STANDARDS ISSUE WARNING ON COPYCAT WEBSITES THAT CHARGE A FEE

Wrexham Trading Standards is warning the public to be careful when applying for services online as it can be easy to get misled by 'copycat' websites that charge extra, unnecessary costs. Examples where this can happen include applying for or renewing driving licences, passports, European Health Insurance Cards (EHIC), US - Entry Permits, driving tests and child benefit.

Although official websites will sometimes require a fee for making an application, there are a number of third party websites that will charge an additional fee to accept the application, and simply pass it on to the issuing authority.

"You may not even realise you're being misled"

Cllr Hugh Jones, Lead Member for People - Communities, Partnerships Public Protection and Community Safety, said:

"These websites will often look very similar to the official websites, so you may not even realise you're being misled. They usually have a disclaimer and a link to the official site, but this may be in small print that can easily be missed. Often members of the public only find out they have used one of these copycat websites when it's too late and they have paid the extra fee.

Take your time to make sure you're using the official site to avoid paying out any unnecessary costs."

Advice from Trading Standards is to be extra careful if doing a general search through a search engine as this is far more likely to result in third party websites being listed in the results.

Check what the official web address is for the service you're looking for, and type that in instead, taking some time to double check the website you open to make sure it's the official version and that the fee is what you were expecting.

"111" LAUNCHED IN NORTH WALES

ON TUESDAY 22 JUNE 2021

Patients in North Wales are now able to call 111 for free access to urgent out-of-hours medical care and round-the-clock health support and guidance from Tuesday 22nd June 2021

Health advice and information can also be found on the NHS 111 Wales website, which includes online symptom checkers for common complaints and conditions.

The easy-to-remember number is free to call from landlines and mobiles and provides access to both GP Out of Hours services and health advice from NHS Wales. It will help patients get the right information, guidance and treatment in the right place at the right time.

North Wales is the latest area of the country to roll out the clinically-led national service.

Callers can receive health advice over the phone, be invited to attend a Minor Injury Unit or arrange an urgent assessment by an out of hours GP or nurse practitioner depending on their symptoms.

Dr Chris Stockport, Executive Director of Primary and Community Services at Betsi Cadwaladr University Health Board said:

"The introduction of NHS 111 Wales in our area will help people across North Wales get the healthcare support they need free of call charges and in a way which suits them - and will also deliver real benefits for patients and for the health service.

"After the launch, callers to the simple and memorable 111 number will receive expert advice and guidance at any time. They will be fully assessed and if they need to be seen by a doctor or another healthcare professional out of hours while their own GP practice is closed, this will be arranged.

"Patients now have a really easy way to access healthcare information and urgent care advice 24/7. We hope this will help people get the right information, guidance and treatment in the right place at the right time."

In an emergency, patients should attend one of our emergency departments or dial 999 for an ambulance.

Richard Bowen, Programme Director for 111 NHS Wales said:

"Accessing urgent care services can be really quite confusing if you're a member of the public - it can be difficult to know which services are available and when, and which healthcare professional or service is best placed to meet your needs.

"NHS Wales want to make that simpler for patients, so from June 22nd, people living in the Betsi Cadwaladr area will now only need to call one number - 111 for a range of health care advice and support.

"In a time of huge pressure on the health service, it's fantastic to be able to work with health professionals including nurses, GPs, pharmacists and paramedics to ensure our patients get the help they need as effectively and efficiently as possible."

NHS 111 Wales is staffed by a large team of nurses, medics and pharmacists, plus dozens of highly-trained new call handlers. The service is operated by the Welsh Ambulance Services NHS Trust from bases across Wales, including a large centre in St Asaph.

Health Minister, Eluned Morgan, has welcomed the roll-out of the 111 health advice service to North Wales.

People in North Wales will be able to dial 111 to get non-urgent medical advice and access to their out of hours service.

111 is a free treatment and advice service, managed by a team of professionals, who will quickly help users get the right treatment at the right time and in the right place. The service is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Advice is also available online at www.111.wales.nhs.uk.

The service has now been rolled out to all health board areas of Wales, except Cardiff and Vale, which is expected to come online later this financial year.

Residents of Cardiff and Vale the Glamorgan can currently get advice over the phone, by calling the 'CAV 24/7' urgent care line on 0300 10 20 247.

Eluned Morgan said: "I am delighted the free 111 number will now be available across North Wales and the whole of Wales will be covered by April 2022.

"The 111 service will support people to receive the most appropriate services for their needs, and reduce the pressure on our 999 service. When the NHS is experiencing high demand the service is particularly useful in ensuring people are directed to the most appropriate services.

"Supported by the 111 website, this easy to remember free phone service will make it easier for anyone to access the support they need." ENDS

Digital NHS COVID Pass available in Wales for urgent travel

People living in Wales who have received the Covid vaccine will be able to access their vaccination status via the internet from today [25 June] to generate an NHS COVID Pass for urgent outbound international travel.

Vaccine certificates have been available in Wales since May for those who need to urgently travel internationally and provide proof of their vaccination status, with certificates being sent in the post. The paper certificates will continue to be issued only for people who are unable to access the digital Pass. Access to the NHS COVID Pass in Wales means that proof of vaccination will be available for people to show on their phone, tablet or laptop.

Covid vaccination status is available if you:

- Have had the COVID-19 vaccine
- Were vaccinated in Wales
- Are aged 16 or over

The digital pass will show if you have been vaccinated against Covid, although you will still need to check entry requirements for the country you intend to visit such as number of vaccination doses, testing and isolation, and will still need to follow travel rules such as pre-departure testing.

Your Covid vaccination status can be viewed online on the NHS COVID Pass website, where you can either download or print it as a PDF document. This is the only valid digital vaccination status available; any alternative services claiming to offer proof of vaccine status for a fee are not legitimate.

Health Minister Eluned Morgan said:

"I'm pleased that people in Wales can now access their vaccination status via the NHS COVID Pass if they need to travel urgently and have completed their vaccine course."

"It's important to remember that the Welsh Government advice on travel hasn't changed, and people should only consider international travel if absolutely essential."

People in Wales can now access their vaccination status on their phone, tablet or laptop using the digital NHS COVID Pass. Work is ongoing to integrate England's NHS App and NHS Wales systems to allow people in Wales to use it.

People can request a bilingual NHS COVID Pass letter by calling 0300 303 5667. ENDS

APPLICATION FOR YSGOLFUNDING COULD SEE WREXHAM TO BIDSTON LINE IMPROVEMENTS

A recent bid for £30 million to the UK Government's Levelling Up Fund could see long awaited improvements to the Wrexham to Bidston Line taking passengers to and from the North West of England.

Cllr David A Bithell, Lead Member for Environment and Transport, said: "The rail network serves the needs of local businesses, people and communities. We as a Council have long campaigned and lobbied for improvements to this line which supports our Future of Rail document agreed at the councils Executive Board.

"Our aim is to see a 30 minute service along this route along with other routes which could now be closer than ever, hopefully in the December timetable. We will continue to pursue all our Rail aspirations to support better integration between bus and rail and reduce the carbon footprint."

Cllr Mark Pritchard, Leader of the Council and Chair of the Mersey Dee Alliance, said, "I welcome this funding bid which will see good connectivity to the rail network and frequent services to key local, regional and national destinations. All are essential to help stimulate and drive economic growth in Wrexham and the surrounding areas.

"It is essential that we work together across the Mersey Dee Alliance to help support and drive the economy in Wrexham."

This is the third bid to the Levelling Up Fund that has been made to the UK government with the economic prosperity of Wrexham at its heart.

Executive Board last week approved two bids to the fund for improvements to the Racecourse and at the World Heritage site at Pontcysyllte Aqueduct.

Ministers Praise Wrexham-based Wockhardt on Covid vaccine success

Welsh Government Ministers visited Wrexham-based Wockhardt today to praise the workforce's crucial role in manufacturing the Astra Zeneca vaccine, which is playing a major part in Wales's highly successful Covid vaccine programme.

Economy Minister, Vaughan Gething, who has Cabinet-level responsibility for science in the Welsh Government, joined Minister for Rural Affairs and North Wales, and Trefnydd, Lesley Griffiths, on a visit to the Wrexham site to see the vaccine being manufactured first-hand.

Wockhardt is manufacturing the Astra Zeneca vaccine for use across the UK.

The company currently employs around 500 staff in Wrexham. It is the fourth largest generic pharmaceutical company in the UK and Ireland.

Economy Minister, Vaughan Gething said: "It's great to be in Wrexham today to see this truly life-saving vaccine being manufactured here in Wales. I'm particularly pleased to have the opportunity to personally thank the company and its committed workforce for the vital role they're playing in supporting the rollout of the vaccine across Wales and the rest of the UK. This really is a fantastic contribution to tackling this once-in-a-generation pandemic.

"The Welsh Government is committed to supporting the Life Sciences sector in Wales to grow. Wockhardt's continued presence here will play a crucial role in helping us realise our ambition." Minister for Rural Affairs and North Wales, and Trefnydd, Lesley Griffiths, said:

"I'm immensely proud the Astra Zeneca vaccine is being manufactured right here in North Wales. When the call came, Wockhardt and its workforce stepped up to help.

"I'm pleased to see a leading global company like Wockhardt based here in North Wales and playing a key role in helping protect and save lives during the pandemic." ENDS

MOBILE TESTING OPEN AT WREXHAM INDUSTRIAL ESTATE

A mobile testing unit will open on Wrexham Industrial Estate to make it easier for people working there to get a Covid-19 test. The move is part of ongoing work to help keep virus cases low in Wrexham.

The easy-access testing facility will be offering rapid lateral flow tests at the Redwither Business Park, every Monday starting from June 7.

The facility is based in the overflow carpark adjacent to the staff car park, and will be open between 8am and 4pm on June 7, and between 12pm and 8pm on June 14. After that, the opening times will be reviewed.

Staff working on the industrial estate who don't have symptoms are being encouraged to get tested at the unit (anyone who does have symptoms should self-isolate immediately and book a PCR test).

About one in three people with coronavirus don't have symptoms, but can still infect others, and getting tested regularly is the only way to know if you have the virus.

If people test positive and self-isolate, it helps stop the virus spreading.

The work is being co-ordinated by Betsi Cadwaladr University Health Board, Wrexham Council and Welsh Ambulance Services NHS Trust.

Quick and convenient

Councillor Hugh Jones, Wrexham Council's Lead Member for Public Protection, said: "This is good news and will provide a quick and convenient way for people working on the industrial estate to get a test.

"Many people who work on the estate haven't been able to work from home during the pandemic and have to travel into their workplace every day. So knowing they can easily get a test will hopefully provide them - and their employers - with more peace of mind, and help prevent transmission of the virus.

"It's important to note that this is a positive and pro-active step. The figures remain very good in Wrexham, with a very low number of cases, and this is just another way to help us keep on top of things and keep cases down."

Teresa Owen, Betsi Cadwaladr University Health Board's Executive Director of Public Health, added: "We are pleased to be working with Wrexham Council to offer workers in this area of Wrexham access to a rapid test at our temporary WAST Mobile Testing Unit.

"This will ensure that workers in this area can access testing closer to where they work...avoiding concerns associated with travelling to get a test. Workers will become more confident and skilled at self-testing which will provide reassurance in workplaces.

"The number of cases of Covid-19 has fallen, although it is still circulating within our communities and it's important that we still test to identify individuals who are showing no symptoms and are unaware they may be infecting others.

"Anyone who is experiencing symptoms of Covid-19 must self-isolate immediately and book a test."

If you can't work from home, you can also order rapid lateral flow test kits to be sent to your home via the Welsh Government website.

Or you can collect them in person from local collection points.

If your test is positive, you should book a PCR test within 24 hours of the positive lateral flow test result.

Welsh Government extends measures to protect businesses from eviction until end of September 2021

Businesses affected by the Coronavirus pandemic will now be protected from eviction until the end of September 2021, Economy Minister Vaughan Gething has announced.

As part of interventions the Welsh Government is making to support businesses, the moratorium against forfeiture for the non-payment of rent will now be extended until September 30, 2021. It was originally due to end on June 30, 2021.

This measure will ensure businesses will not forfeit their business tenancies for non-payment of rent until 30 September this year, but businesses should continue to pay rent wherever possible, and it is in the interests of both landlords and tenants to reach negotiated agreements on any arrears.

The move will help a range of sectors including retail, hospitality, leisure and tourism at what continues to be an incredibly challenging trading period, whilst Coronavirus restrictions ease.

Since the beginning of the pandemic, the Welsh Government has ensured that more than £2.5billion has reached businesses across Wales with more money reaching firms every day. The Welsh Government's package of business support is in addition to that available from the UK Government and is one of the most generous in the UK. In addition, unlike in England, Welsh Ministers have ensured the 100% rates relief scheme for retail, hospitality and leisure businesses will run for the full 12 months of this financial year. This measure is backed by £380 million to help provide breathing space for around 70,000 businesses this year."

Economy Minister, Vaughan Gething said:

"The coronavirus pandemic has been a harrowing experience for us all, not least for businesses and their employees across Wales. We've pulled every lever possible to support them during this incredibly challenging time.

"We're committed to doing all we can do secure jobs and livelihoods. That's why I'm today announcing a further extension of measures to prevent forfeiture for the non-payment of rent, which will protect businesses from eviction.

"Since the beginning of the pandemic, we've committed more than £2.5bn to businesses across Wales, in addition to our business as usual support through Business Wales. Businesses in the hardest hit sectors also continue to benefit from a full 12 month business rates holiday package.

"Combined, these measures have helped protect thousands of firms and safeguard many more jobs. It's a key part of our plans to kick-start a strong Welsh recovery post-pandemic.

"We remain committed to backing Welsh firms."

The UK Government recently announced how it intends deal with the issue of commercial rent arrears built up during the pandemic.

The Welsh Government will consider the matter further for Wales in the months ahead.

The realisation of a Football Museum for Wales here in Wrexham has come a step closer with the appointment of the design team.

Haley Sharp Design (hsd), together with architects Purcell and quantity surveyors MDA Consulting, will work with Wrexham Council and the Welsh Government to develop the designs of the new museum before construction begins in 2022.

Meet the team

hsd are world leading interpretative designers who have nearly 40 years of experience leading visitor-focussed museum redevelopment projects. Other heritage projects they've worked on include Stonehenge Visitor Centre, Grand Egyptian Museum in Cairo, and the Ice Age Fossils State Park in Las Vegas. Their experience working in Wales includes Big Pit: National Coal Museum, Blaenavon World Heritage Site and Cardigan Castle.

David Donoghue, Creative Director at hsd commented: "We are proud to be working with Wrexham Council, the Welsh Government and communities across Wales to develop a new, dynamic museum experience to enable everyone to actively engage with their heritage. We can't wait to start exploring the rich stories and collections, and to create impactful and exciting proposals." Purcell are one of the world's leading design practices with more than 70 years' experience as architects, master-planners and heritage consultants. This includes experience with the existing museum building, having written a conservation plan for the building in 2005.

Purcell Associate, Jane Roylance, said: "Purcell are delighted to have the opportunity to continue working with Wrexham Council, supporting hwd and the project sponsors to achieve their vision for a football Museum for Wales and for Wrexham Museum; an iconic building in the heart of historic Wrexham."

MDA Consulting are an international property and construction consultancy who also celebrated their 70th year of trading in 2021. MDA have extensive experience of working in the heritage sector and have in the past been involved in projects with the National Museum of Wales. Other notable heritage projects MDA have worked on include Alexandra Palace, Museum of London, Dorset County Museum, Stonehenge Visitor Centre and Louvre Abu Dhabi. Managing Director, Steve Jones, said: "MDA Consulting are delighted to be part of the team to help deliver this exciting new project for Wales and Wrexham."

'Real progress being made'

The new Football Museum will be based within the Wrexham Museum building on Regent Street in the town centre.

Major refurbishment work will be carried out so that both the Football Museum and Wrexham Museum can exist side by side. Over the next few months, the team will work with the public and stakeholders to develop the design of the new museum, together with its visitor facilities and public programmes. As well as the new football museum, the Wrexham Museum displays will also be refreshed and enlarged as part of the project.

New Welsh Government Deputy Minister responsible for Arts and Sport Dawn Bowden said, "I am delighted to see that real progress is now being made in moving this very significant project for Wrexham and Northeast Wales forward and I look forward to working with Wrexham Council to bring this exciting development to completion."

A major new attraction for Wrexham town centre'

Wrexham Council's Lead Member for People - Communities, Partnerships Public Protection and Community Safety, Cllr Hugh Jones said: "The new Football Museum will be a major new attraction for Wrexham town centre, drawing visitors from all over the country and beyond. It will tell the story of football in Wales in all its diversity, from the clubs and supporters across the country, all the way up to the national teams and their historic achievements.

"We are delighted to welcome Haley Sharp Design and look forward to seeing this exciting project progressing as we move towards the next stage of its development."

Wrexham Council's Chief Executive, Ian Bancroft, said: "The appointment of such a strong world class design team reflects the commitment both of the Council and the Welsh Government to create a museum which will recognise the importance of football in Wales and secure Wrexham's place as the spiritual home of football in Wales.

"This significant step forward for the project comes at a hugely exciting time for football fans here in Wrexham and across Wales. We congratulate the national team for their fantastic achievements this summer and for adding another thrilling chapter to Welsh football history." Please go to the Wrexham Museum website for more information.

Hello

The Senedd Yr Ifanc are proud to share their new promotion film that they have been developing. The members would like to launch a promotional drive and would appreciate your support please. Please can we ask that you share with your young people, on your websites, on your social media's and with any of your contacts who work with young people in Wrexham. Thank you.

If you have any young people interested please don't hesitate to get in touch.

Hope you enjoy the film. Senedd yr Ifanc - Do you want to have a say? Do you want to make a change?

The following message was sent out on facebook last year as the shock and power of the virus began to dawn on us all. (sadly I missed reading it then):

"To all our customers and friends.
During this very difficult time for everyone with the Coronavirus pandemic, we - Jets Transfers - would like to try and help our community to survive this crisis.

If anyone needs any help with deliveries we are available to help whether it be just voluntarily collecting prescriptions or shopping. We are well known in Ruabon and are completely trustworthy and, I am sure, the members of Friends of Ruabon would be willing to vouch for us.

Stay safe and look after yourselves.

Julian and Annette."

Annette and Julian

(Unfortunately I missed out on reading about this promise).

Since this advert, both Annette and Julian have suffered severe personal losses, but luckily, have heaps of friends supporting them through their personal crises.

As lockdown eases we all know that J.E.T.S Transfers will, once again be hot on the list for those needing its reliable and courteous services. (Personally I wouldn't use any other service, for my family visits from Australia). Sybil Bremner.
